

Vacancy: FFN Volunteer

Who are we?

Future For Nature \(FFN\) is a non-profit organisation that supports young, talented and ambitious nature conservationists committed to protecting species of wild animals and plants. Each year FFN organizes the Future For Nature Award Event where three winners are given the prestigious Future For Nature Award and €50,000 to spend where it's most needed.

Position description

FFN is always looking for passionate and dedicated volunteers to join the team. Volunteers help with our annual Award Event, our website social media output and more. FFN is a growing organisation and always looking for new, inspiring ideas from its volunteers, so within this position you can both gain valuable work experience as well as contribute to the organisation with your creativity. The work will be done remotely (from home or any other place you choose), but you are expected to attend the quarterly volunteer meetings in Arnhem.

Time commitment 2 hours per week on voluntary basis

Some qualities we look for in our volunteers

- You are capable to work as part of a team as well as independently.
- You have a flexible and proactive 'can do' approach.
- You have an affinity with nature and conservation.
- You are communicative towards colleagues and our network.
- You have strong attention to detail.
- You have a good command of the English language
- Optional: Competent and creative in writing texts (in English) and making visuals for website and social media.
- Optional: Experience with managing a professional social media account.
- Optional: Experience with photo- and videography and editing.

What can we offer you?

If you want gain valuable and practical work experience and contribute to an organisation that makes a difference in nature conservation, FFN is the place for you! We have a quarterly get together with our team of volunteers (often in Burgers' Zoo) and you are invited to attend our inspiring, annual Future For Nature Award Event.
